

For Murder.

endant and Jane Miller, his wife, who have testified in this case are competent witnesses so to do, but the fact that the defendant, David Miller, is the defendant on trial and that Jane Miller is the wife of the defendant, David Miller, may be taken into the consideration and the jury, as well as their interest in the result of the trial, in determining the weight that should be given to their testimony.

The court instructs the jury that, under the laws of this state, the defendant is a competent witness to testify in his own behalf, and his evidence cannot be disregarded because he is the defendant charged with a commission of a crime. The law presumes the defendant to be innocent of the crime charged, and, as he is a competent witness under the law, you should, therefore, fairly and impartially weigh and consider his testimony, together with all the other testimony in the case.

The previous good character of the defendant, if you believe from the evidence that the defendant has proved such previous good character, is a fact in the case which you ought to consider in passing upon his guilt or innocence of this charge, but if all the evidence in this case, including that which has been given touching his previous good character, shows him guilty of the charge, then his previous good character cannot justify, excuse, palliate or mitigate the offense.

The court instructs the jury that, under the law and evidence in this case, the jury will find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree or you will acquit him.

If you find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, you will merely so say in your verdict. To the court belongs the duty and responsibility of affixing the punishment the law provides for the crime.

After the jury had been instructed, the case was opened for the state Thursday evening by John W. Stokes, attorney for the state, who called for the state's case. The case was opened by John W. Stokes, attorney for the state, who called for the state's case. The case was opened by John W. Stokes, attorney for the state, who called for the state's case.

The best legal talent in the county was employed on both sides, and a strong fight was made. At the hour of going to press, Saturday morning, the jury had not reached a verdict, having been out about 15 hours.

Biography.

David Miller, the defendant, was born in Doniphan County, Kansas, in March, 1854, and was therefore just 45 years old in the month that the crime with which he is charged, was committed. His father and mother still live in Doniphan County, and his brothers, (of whom there are six) live in the same county. One of them was convicted of murder several years ago and sentenced to be hung. But that this sentence was afterwards commuted to imprisonment, and that he is now some where in a penitentiary, David Miller was convicted in 1881 of an assault with intent to kill, committed upon the then acting marshal of the town of Troy, Kansas, and was sent to the penitentiary for the term of two years, but was paroled after the expiration of 20 months, and returned home. He himself was then appointed marshal of the town of Troy and was reappointed for some three or four successive terms thereafter to the same office. He was also afterwards elected constable of the same township (in which Troy is located) in a contest against the same man whom he had been convicted of assaulting. Miller is a Democrat in politics a blacksmith and farm in occupation and has been a German Baptist for 20 years in religion. He was baptized into the church many years ago by immersion three times, face foremost. His complexion is dark and somewhat swarthy, his eyes are black as are his hair, and he will weigh about 150 pounds. He has been married twice, his first wife being dead, and his second wife is now here at the trial. The second marriage occurred some 16 or 17 years ago. His present wife is quite a large stout woman and is a sister to the Ferguson boys.

From Ed. Rostock.

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 21.—After leaving Honolulu we were 16 days and 17 hours getting to Manila, at which place we arrived on the morning of the 11th of September, but we lay aboard ship till the 14th when we were landed and put aboard the cars at Calumpit and camped three days and nights with Co. H., of the Third Light Artillery, before we could get a boat up the Rio Grande river to Candaba where two battalions of the 22d are stationed. Three days out from Manila, we passed two small islands inhabited by convicts escaped from the penal settlements of Australia. Two of the people came out to the ship in a row boat for papers and mail.

We had one death aboard ship from pneumonia. I made the acquaintance of a young man by the name of Howard, from Grant City, Mo., who, by the way, is a nephew of Mrs. McKinney, Dr. Thatcher's cousin. He enlisted at Winfield, Kansas.

The boys on the ship gambled all the way over for butter, safety-pins, matches, and every thing else. We have not been paid yet and won't until November. We passed, after leaving Honolulu, a volcano in action. It was a grand sight and well worth my trip in itself. The ocean from Honolulu to Manila was almost as smooth as glass, and we had a fine trip. While laying in Manila Bay waiting to go ashore, the 19th Infantry and band went aboard the transport Indiana on their way to Iloilo to relieve the Tennessee boys. The band played "After Retreat on the Boat." Fred Fred Markland had caught to been here as they played a couple of his favorite pieces, viz. "Uncle Zuke," and "A Hot Time in the Old Town." There was a lot of prisoners on the Indiana going back to serve out their time on Albatross Island in San Francisco Bay, for robbing the commissary.

The railroad is English and engines and cars are the same as in England, all partitioned off and doors all along the sides, and a foot rail running along the whole length of each car. There are rifle-pits made of stone, sand bags and earth all along the railroad, and you can see the marks of battle all along the line. Calumpit, where we leave the cars, is where Col. Funston swam the Rio Grande river. There is a rice mill there which the insurgents burned, also a cathedral which they destroyed to keep our soldiers from using it as barracks. The traffic of Manila Bay is all done by the Japanese and their barges drawn by small steam-tugs. The city of Manila looked beautiful from the Bay, but the reality when one gets into it is enough to make one turn sick. All of those Jap barges have on board their pets, the chicken and pig. I would like to send you a sample of the bugs here.

The Missouri razor back is not in it by a whole lot. They have small ears, a long nose, and a tail almost touching the ground with a brush on the end like a mule. The commissary clerk of our ship was knocked down into the hold of the ship, breaking an arm a leg, and injuring him internally. The Japs coal a ship by filling small baskets and passing them from one to another, and it is done very rapidly. The natives are mostly good looking, but are like Dooley says "hurried and incomplete in their dress" and wear no clothes except what they have on. The island are handsome if they were not so savage and blood-thirsty in their methods. I have seen the Chinese "hit the pipe" (smoke opium). I have also found a man who laughs exactly like Frank Sutton, when he laughed I looked around expecting to see Frank. The natives are terribly afraid of the colored troops (24 and 25). I have seen one of the old Spanish Catholic grave yards. The walls are about twelve feet thick and are arched off into graves just large enough to admit one body. When anybody gets too poor to pay the tax upon a grave, the bones of their deceased friend are pulled out and thrown upon a pile. The volunteers tore open quite a few looting after money and jewelry. "Vino" is a native drink. I have not tried any yet, but they say it is "ferce." It doesn't take effect for about four hours after you drink it, so a person would have to start yesterday if he wanted to get drunk today. I wish you could hear the racket when the natives start to get upon a train. Everything about here is mud. Co. K took a scout yesterday and came back splashed with mud to the neck. I did not go out as we recruits had not yet drawn guns and ammunition. There is a fine church here, also a convent, but they are now used as barracks for the soldiers, although several companies are quartered in native huts, set up on posts of bamboo about five feet high; the floors are made of split bamboo and it's no trouble to spit through anywhere. There is very little paving in town, and what there is of square stones thrown down upon the ground just far enough apart to step from one to another; the balance of the town is mud.

The chaplain of our regiment is Catholic and holds the rank of captain. He is very nice—he puts me very much in mind of Rev. Smith. He visited our quarters the other day, and we all stood at attention when he came in, but he made us all sit down again, said he had only come in to make a friendly visit and have a little neighborly chat. The transport steamer Morgan City went down on the coast of Japan, as I guess you have seen ere this by the papers. We drill three times a day, (we recruits), but we feel well. The other day we had chicken—just think of that, and today we had fish. A few of the boys have dobe-it-itch caused from wading mud and water. It is very painful, as it swells their ankles terribly, and in some cases is very hard to get red of. Our first sergeant has only a few days to serve when he will be retired. I almost forgot to mention a spring of water coming out of a pier of the railroad bridge at Calumpit. It is sulphur water and comes from the bottom of the river, up through a pipe built into the pier.

Agualdo has made some kind of offer for peace which you will also learn from the papers more fully than I can write it. Goats are plentifully scattered about town. There is also a small herd of sheep, but they are like the proverbial pound of soap (not very large) and down well I should guess. These are here, thick, and most interesting looking lot I have been my luck to see any where. They can talk about these people over being behind the times, but all the churches here have lightning rods on them made of galvanized wire cable-rope.

Water buffaloes, (the beast of burden in the islands) are a peculiar lot. They are slow, ugly, and will not work unless allowed to wallow in the mud and water about so long every day. The vehicles of the islands are two wheeled carts and sleds made of bamboo. Yesterday I drew my gun and ammunition, and spent yesterday afternoon and this forenoon in cleaning up. (This is Sunday, September 21st, and as you will wonder at the time of this letter, I will say that I have not written it all in one day, but have written a little every day since arriving at Candaba, but I hope to finish up today.) I have found one good relic since being here a string of beads found under a shanty. I had the good fortune to borrow 810 of one of my bunk mates till pay day, and I have laid a plentiful supply of tobacco, towels, soap, comb, brush, glass and writing material. The company commander is also very good and brought what I wanted he has generously given me credit at the commissary. Now I must close and get this letter in the mail, or you will be a very long time in getting it. Always the same.

En. Co. K., 22d Inf., Manila, P. I.

P.S.—My regards to all old friends and tell some of them to write as my time is pretty well taken up.

ADMISSION 15 CTS.

The British Defeated.

London, Oct. 31. The war office has received a despatch from General White, commanding the British forces at Ladysmith, reporting that the Royal Irish Fusiliers, No. 10 mountain battery and the Gloucestershire regiment, were surrounded in the hills by the Boers, and after losing heavily, obliged to capitulate. General White adds that the casualties have not yet been ascertained.

The following is the text of General White's despatch to the war office.

"Ladysmith, Oct. 30, 10:35 p. m.—I have to report a disaster to the column sent by me to take a position on a hill to guard the left flank of the troops. In these operations today the Royal Irish Fusiliers, No. 10 mountain battery and the Gloucestershire regiment were surrounded in the hills, and after losing heavily had to capitulate. The casualties have not yet been ascertained.

London, Nov. 2.—A special despatch from Ladysmith says twenty British dead and 100 wounded have been counted on the scene of Monday's disaster, while 800 prisoners were sent to Pretoria. Another list of casualties at Ladysmith was issued by the war office today. It gives eighty-two non-commissioned officers and men of the Dublin Fusiliers missing, indicating that the Boers captured as many fusiliers as they did his men.

Dr. James Hedley.

"The Y. M. C. A. Lecture course was opened last night by Dr. James Hedley, the distinguished lecturer. Dr. Hedley is a man of national reputation, having delivered some of his famous lectures over seven hundred times. His subject last night was 'What is a Man Worth?' and the speaker held his audience for nearly two hours with magnetic power. Many of his best points were humorously illustrated and often brought storms of applause from the audience, and it could not be said the sole object of the speaker was to make people laugh. He impressed the audience with the fact that he had something to say and knew how to say it." The Gazette, St. Joseph, Mo. Dr. Hedley will deliver one of his interesting lectures at the M. E. church, in this city, Saturday evening, Nov. 11. This is the first of the series of lectures to be given here this winter by our lecture bureau. His subject will be announced later.
